The former kaiser of Germany is both in Holland and in Dutch.

The thing has been so thoroughly advertised that when the former crown prince of Germany really does try to escape from internment in Holland he will find an amateur detective at every turn.

By instituting taxation proceedings against him, Holland may be taking the preliminary steps toward informing the ex-kaiser that his presence is not altogether desirable. At any rate, the thrifty Dutch are going to get something in compensation for the worry which they are forced to go through as entertainers of the man now caught by the allies.

Lest the matter be overlooked, we remind you that in case a communicable disease breaks out in your household you are required to placard your own house for quarantine, under the new system of district health officer service. You get the placards from the city or town clerk, on orders from the district health officer, who in the Barre district is Dr. C. H. Burr of Montpelier.

Service men who may have a feeling that they have seen enough of celebrations in their honor should bear in mind that the people who stayed at home are anxious to see the boys en masse and in their uniforms on the Fourth of July. It will be a great stimulus to enthusiasm to have a thousand service men marching in Barre's parade on Friday, and every man in the two counties of Washington and Orange should make a special effort to be out in uniform in order to make the greatest military demonstration ever seen in Barre. Incidentally, the men would find an incentive to be present because of the splendid features which have been prepared to mark their welcome home. Let every man come out.

The continued dry weather is sure to make conditions which will be hazardous because of the use of fire for the Fourth of July celebrations next Friday. Buildings are very dry, and their roofs are particularly inflammable; grass is being reduced to the tinder stage; and rubbish will quickly catch fire. Therefore, there is great danger that serious fires may be started in any community unless utmost precaution is taken. To guard against fires, it will be wise to remove all waste material before the day's celebrations begin; merchants should remove all packing boxes and paper from the exterior of their stores and householders should pick up about their property. No inflammable materials ought to be left where chance firebrands could alight and start a fire. Unless these precautions are taken, there is danger of serious loss in Barre or any other place where celebrations of considerable magnitude are to take place.

THE INFANTILE PARALYSIS CLINICS.

Parents or guardians of children who are afflicted by the after-effects of infantile paralysis will be interested to learn that another series of infantile paralysis clinics will be held at five hospitals in Vermont during the time from July 9 to 16, at which instruction will be given in the methods to be pursued to overcome the effects of the disease. Dr. Robert W. Lovett, a professor in the Harvard Medical school, will again be in charge of the clinics and will be assisted by Miss Bertha E. Weisbrod, a former pupil of Dr. Lovett, and who will, later, attend to the follow-up work along the lines developed by the clinics. In Washington county a clinic will be held at Heaton hospital, Montpelier, Tuesday and Wednesday, July 15 and 16. Parents and others in charge of crippled children should arrange to take advantage of the free clinics.
